Dog waste

Our furry friends are apart of the family. We love them and you are responsible for their care. According to Howard County Animal Control Laws, “Owners are responsible for immediately removing pet defecation when off their own property”. You may visit the webpage at: www.howardcountymd.gov/police/howard-county-animal-control-laws

Please be courteous and pick up after your dog. Throw your dog waste in a public trashcan or your OWN trashcan. Please do not place dog waste in other people’s trashcans. It is your dog waste.

Lastly, NEVER place dog waste in a recycling can. This message is for adults and children. Parents, please teach your children to be responsible dog owners.

Dorsey Hall Garden Club

While on vacation this summer, I went hiking through a moss laden wood. Cool and green, it was almost magical. Tall pines along with oaks and maples and a few white birch trees provided a shady reprieve from the intense summer sun. The feeling has stayed with me and I started thinking how too often, our desire for the perfect fescue lawn has made areas of moss in our yards the enemy; something to be eradicated and replaced.

In Annie Martin's book, The Magical World of Moss Gardening, I found out a few interesting and beneficial facts about this green carpet like plant. Mosses, along with Liverworts and Hornworts are small non-vascular flowerless plants. Their spores are spread by the wind and they grow in moist and shaded places, on the ground and on trees and rocks. These facts we may know, but there are also many benefits to consider if you are deciding whether to keep or remove moss from your yard.

Mosses are ecofriendly! They require no chemicals, no fertilizers, pesticides or herbicides. Thus, reducing groundwater contaminants into our streams and waterways. And we all know the benefits of clean water. Mosses don't require mowing, which reduces your time and improves air quality. They also control erosion. Since they are an upright grower with long rhizoids, they are a good alternative for steep banks and slopes. They are also an excellent plant for carbon sequestration. Martin writes in her book, "Sphagnum peatlands soak up vast amounts of carbon dioxide from the air, far exceeding the rate of carbon sequestration by all rainforests combined."

The benefits of moss extend beyond our yards. There are medical uses also. Mosses can absorb a third of their weight in water. Matins writes, "The absorbent properties of mosses have provided medicinal and hygienic options for people throughout history." Some varieties have been used to treat colds, tumors, cancer, fungus and much more. Native American women chewed the stems of Polytrichum moss to ease the pain of childbirth and used them in concocting brews and ointment from leaves as treatment for fevers, aches and other pains. A quick read on the medical uses of mosses reveals a rich history practiced in many cultures around the world.

There are few moss gardens in the Western Hemisphere, and scientific works have mentioned such gardens in America as early as the 1930's. Some were even incorporated into the designs by Frederic Law Olmsted, (1822-1903); the American landscape architect of Central Park. Moss is often integrated into an overall garden design, especially if they feature Japanese or Asian elements. The Addy Aldrich Rockefeller Garden in Mt. Desert Island Maine, has used this technique in a portion of their design which features a Spirit Path. In this part of the garden, moss blends with the placement of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century Korean stone sculptures brought back from the Rockefellers' travels. Here, the use of moss gives a 'other world' feel to the space and overall design.

Public gardens featuring mosses are noted in Martin's book. Examples are; the Golden Gate Park Garden in San Francisco, the Portland Japanese Garden in Oregon among others. Closer to home, we have the Hume's Japanese Stroll Garden in Mill Neck NY, the Woodland Garden in Brevard, NC, the Duke Garden, in Durham NC, the Liela Barnes and the Cheatham Learning Moss Garden in Highland, NC. Martin also lists several private gardens open to the public.

So, now when I look at my own backyard, I see how one can build a design that connects nature to the human spirit. I see the benefit that nature has provided in the growth of moss along my stream and in shaded parts of the yard. The beauty of this discovery changed my approach to gardening and has opened up new possibilities.

More information on moss can be found at the University of Maryland Extension website.

DORSEY HALL DEER
MANAGEMENT TASK FORCE

Dorsey Hall Deer Management Task Force

Some residents are concerned about the over population of the deer in our Village and have formed the Dorsey Hall Deer Management Task Force. This group welcomes residents with different views in regards to programs offered in Howard County specific to the Howard County Open Space that borders our Village. If you are interested in joining this group, please contact Karen Carter at 3carters@verizon.net.

It is important for all of our residents to feel safe. It is also important to note that there is an overpopulation of deer in our area. How can we find a satisfactory middle ground for hunting? Join the task force. The Task Force is beginning to build a survey that will address the deer/hunting concerns in the Village. Join the Task Force. Please look for the survey in future newsletters.
